

ABSTRACT

A circuit arrangement includes respective amplification devices for transmitting and receiving signals, with each amplification device having more than one amplification stage for the signal to be transmitted or received. An antenna can be connected to the amplification devices. At least one of the amplification stages is jointly used by the two amplification devices.